ARLIS/NY at Half-Year
by Clayton Kiefer, ARLIS/NY Chair 2000

Like much else, ARLIS sessions in the Spring! The annual meeting in Pittsburgh in March was a great success and New York was very well represented in all facets of the meeting. New Yorkers planned and moderated sessions, participated as presenters, provided very generous contributions to both the welcome party and the first annual fund-raising “bucket auction,” socialized, networked, and celebrated, all with style and enthusiasm. [See report on p. 6]. And, of course, all who were there witnessed Ted Goodnow’s continuing ascendency to the presidential chair! Closer to home, the Chapter has had an eventful program schedule. The Spring Meeting at The Brooklyn Museum of Art, on April 5, included an engaging, in-depth tour of the exhibition, Artists Books, by its curator, Deirdre Lawrence (see report on p. 8), and the day trip to Yale University on April 29 was a resounding hit. Thanks to all who helped in the organization and planning of these and other events. They could not have happened without your participation.

Looking ahead, there are several interesting possibilities for meeting sites and programs. [See p. 5 for past meetings.] The Grey Art Gallery at New York University has been suggested as a location for the Fall Business Meeting, which would include a tour of Face to Face: Chinese, 1900-2000, and a reception. A day tour of the gardens at Gettysburg and the Nanaas County Museum has been proposed. The Delaware Valley Chapter is interested in planning a two-day joint meeting in the Spring of 2001. This would take place at Bryn Mawr College and would center around a workshop, possibly on bibliographic instruction. Regional meetings have been very successful for other chapters, so this possibility has a lot of appeal. Kristin Ivy, from the Delaware Valley Chapter, has submitted an application to ARLIS/NA for special funding for this meeting. Let me know what you think. If you have not been there already, take a look at the ARLIS/NA website. It just keeps getting better. Find it at http://homepage.newschool.edu/~gjeertsoc/ars.htm

ARLIS/NA is particularly fortunate to have ready access to such a rich array of resources for programming. I would sincerely appreciate comments from the membership on past programs, as well as suggestions for future projects. I can be reached by e-mail at kirkeing@new.school.edu or at, (212) 229-8915.

Annual Conference 2000 in Pittsburgh

by Rebecca Wilkins

Thanks to Rebecca Wilkins, this year’s winner of ARLIS/New York’s Olene Palatsky Memorial Travel Award, for the following report of the ARLIS/NA Annual 2000 Conference, held in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, March 16-22. In 1994 Ms. Wilkins began working in the Fine Arts and Recreation Division of the Queens Borough Public Library in Jamaica, where she currently holds the title of Assistant Division Manager.

Stepping off the plane at the Pittsburgh International Airport, I felt a surge of excitement. I was about to attend my first ARLIS/NA conference and was coming home. I grew up in Pittsburgh, and attended the University of Pittsburgh for my B.A. and M.L.S. To see the city from a new perspective would be interesting.

At the conference, I hoped to discover an aspect of Pittsburgh previously unknown to me. That’s why I chose the “Pilgrimage to Ethnic Churches” tour. This fascinating tour included a variety of churches representing the ethnic diversity of the city. The tour began with the Calvary United Methodist Church, a stunning structure modeled after Notre Dame Cathedral at Chartres, and located near the birthplace of the American painter, Mary Cassatt. We walked past a church (unfortunately closed) designed by H. H. Richardson, and then headed to the Shrine of St. Anthony. I never knew that the world’s largest collection of relics—over 5,000 items—was located in a suburb of Pittsburgh! According to Sister Margaret, who cataloged the relics, highlights of the collection include a nail from the Crucifixion, a piece from the table of the Last Supper, and pieces of Joseph’s staff and Mary’s veil. Our next stop was St. Nicholas, a Croatian church with iconostasis. Combining traditional religious imagery with modern references, the mosaics include an image of a soldier bayoneting Christ. Most fascinating was the mural showing Andrew Carnegie smoking, reading the stock reports, with a hungry miner nearby. We stopped at two other churches and a synagogue before returning to the hotel to attend the plenary session.

Speakers Mike Eversmeyer and Barbara Jones talked about “Pittsburgh Art and Architecture.” Of particular interest was the survey of the city’s architectural history. Examples in the talks ranged from the Block House at Fort Pitt (the oldest building in the city) to the mansions of Henry Clay Frick and other turn-of-the-century (19th/20th) millionaires, so the Nationality Rooms still in the process of being built at the University of Pittsburgh.

Then there were the ARLIS sessions and meetings. The Public Libraries Discussion Group, led by my Queens Borough Public Library colleague and fellow ARLIS/NA member Jeffrey Stephens, proved to be extremely valuable. Our discussion included weeding criteria and space problems. Given great public libraries, the rapidly expanding use of art-related electronic resources, and the dwindling use of picture collections. It was helpful and inspiring to hear how other public libraries are dealing with similar concerns.

My other favorite session was “Taming the Untamable: Art Related Indexes in a Changing Environment,” an exciting overview of several electronic resources. The speakers established that online indexes provide speed, user-friendliness, and depth of information beyond that found in... print versions. I am convinced that my library would greatly benefit from access to: 1) the Grove Dictionary of Art Online, with over 45,000 articles on its regularly updated website, 2) Art Index Full-Text, which would make research so much easier for both librarians and customers, and, 3) AKBibliographies Modern, with over 250,000 abstracts and summaries covering the art of impressionism through that of the 21st century. Free trial subscriptions offered by the services will allow for further exploration of the databases.

There were many other educational and enjoyable aspects to the conference, including the exhibit hall, with its enticing book displays, the convivial and the wonderful Arts Libri reception in the beautiful Carnegie Music Hall, the "Art Librarian in the 21st Century" session, and the stunning exhibit, "Books and Beyond: Artists' Books from Ohio Valley Collections," at the University of Pittsburgh Art Gallery.

At the end of the conference, I had a chance to reflect on the past full days. Did I gain all that I had hoped at my first ARLIS/NA conference? Yes. I had the opportunity to meet new colleagues and catch up with colleagues from Pittsburgh and New York. I learned about the latest electronic resources, and received book catalogs from several new vendors. Most importantly, I renewed my job-inspired and refreshed, eager to put to use my new skills and knowledge.

Many thanks to AR LIS/NA and its members for sponsoring my attendance at this conference.

“Artists Books”
Latest Offering in the Series: “Working in Brooklyn”
by Patricia Siska

What are Artists Books: books by, for or about artists? One definition, according to Constance Woo, artist, teacher, and curator, is a work which uses the form and features of a book in an innovative way and explores the book, and all that it means, including text, image, binding, and ‘ordering.’ One of Ms. Woo’s works, Elevated in New York (1999), a tunnel book, figured in an exhibition of artists books held at The Brooklyn Museum from Feb. 4 to May 7, 2000, called “Working in Brooklyn: Artists Books.”

This exhibition—held in the large, open-ended exhibition space just behind the Museum’s main entry hall—was the latest offering in The Museum’s “Working In Brooklyn” exhibition series which began in 1985. (See end of article for list of exhibitions in this series.) According to Deidre Lawrence, the exhibition’s Curator, and Principal Librarian and Coordinator of Research Services for The Brooklyn Museum, the codex form was the underlying factor unifying the items in the show. The 50 works on display, selected from 350 possible entries, consisted of unique works, limited editions, and multiples, made in the 1990s by artists working in Brooklyn.

Unique, Ltd. Eds., & Multiples

Along the perimeters of the room, in cases and on the walls, were the various kinds of artists books, the unique works and limited editions. Artists of unique works in the show included Susan Baron, Douglas Beube, Joan Criswel, Stephanie Brody Lederman, Susan Newmark, Miriam Schaer, Susan Shafe, and Constance Woo. Seventeen limited editions were represented, including a work by Louise Bourgeois, Sjoerd Huffer & Karen O’Hea’s pop-up book, Six Empty Bookcases (1996) and, The River (1995), by Werner Pfeiffer, an accordion book printed without woodcuts. Another limited edition book, B (the work with the shortest title in the exhibition), was produced by Pratt Institute’s School of Art and Design, Art of the Book class, under Mr. Pfeiffer’s direction. B, which stands for Brooklyn and book, includes photographs, earth, and seed among other tangible materials related to Brooklyn history. The book was a result of the collaboration between The Museum’s Library and Pratt Institute’s Artists Books curriculum.

Multiples, the most prolific kind of artist book, were also present in evidence at the show. One, mounted on the wall (with the longest title of all exhibited items), After Reasnable Research: Periods with No Acts of Open and Declared Armed Hostile Conflict are Indicated with a Perpendicular Line. Perhaps They Were Periods of Peace* (1999), by Miranda Maher, was a consideration of the history of war in the world, in the past two millennia. Interestingly, the artist researched and compiled only one year for which there was no record of war (it was the year 327).

Considered a ‘democratic’ art form, multiples are published in bulk—some are sold at Primed Mattz, on Wooster Street. A number of multiples was set on a library table in the exhibition area. Siting at the library table to peruse the books proved irresistible. Deidre Lawrence indicated that during the exhibition—especially on the Museum’s popular ‘First Saturday’ evenings—viewers lined up for a turn to examine the books at the table. This creative mixing of two kinds of art works in the exhibition—that is, original and limited editions which could not be touched, and multiples on the table, which could be touched—had the effect of making the exhibition viewer become part of the exhibition.

ARLIS/NY at Brooklyn Museum’s “Artists Books” Exhibition

ARLIS/NY members were graciously invited by Deidre Lawrence to a reception and guided tour of the exhibition, in addition to holding the Spring Meeting at The Brooklyn Museum, on April 5. The group is comfortably around the library table in the exhibition area, where Carley, a library, Chair of ARSLIS/ NY, held a brief business meeting.

Afterwards, Ms. Lawrence talked about the library, the artists' books collection and the exhibition. She said that it was surprising that "Artists' Books" was the Museum's first exhibition devoted entirely to the art of the book, given the fact that the Museum began as a Library in 1823, and had in 1835 the American poet, Walt Whitman as its Acting Director.

(see Deirdre Lawrence's article, "The Evolution of a Library: the Brooklyn Museum, of Art Libraries and Archives," in Art Documentation, vol. 15, no. 1 (1996)). Regarding the exhibition, Ms. Lawrence said that most exhibited items were from the Library's collection of about 1,000 books by artists. She said that the Library began collecting artists' books in 1971. In conjunction with the exhibition, the first floor, two vitrines located just outside of the Library on the second floor displayed era, Jorge Castañeda, curator, Chair of the ARSLIS/ NY. Included were items by members of 20 Brooklyn Collectives, pieces by artists who work primarily in other media, and books selected from among the 220 artists' books in the collection of Long Island University.

Regarding Artists Books

Dear ARLIS/ny Members,

Do you remember the first time you jumped from the high diving board? Those agonizing moments, minutes or years before you took the big plunge and the exhilarating feeling after your awesome accomplishment? As one who has taken the big step, I can only tell you that my three-year-old retirement experience has been extremely fulfilling and delightful.

After kicking it all off with a dream of a trip, I decided to look into volunteer work, something I could never do with family and career responsibilities. I joined the School Volunteer Program and trained for their Cultural Resources activities in New York City elementary schools. This meant a few class visits to a school that participated in their program as well as class trips to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. We divided the visits into family-size groups, which allowed for discussion and 'museum-quiet' fun.

During these school visits, I learned about the multi-faceted Volunteer Program at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, ideal for a retired art librarian! I believe that my background in art and foreign languages may have been helpful in the admissions process. I participated in a one-year docent training program that consisted of curatorial lectures and gallery talks by specialists; and on my part, research papers and presentations. I am now giving tours to Spanish-speaking visitors and will become a back-up for tours in German.

Commitments are on an annual basis. There are many different programs to join: museum highlights or walking tours in specific galleries, community outreach, school programs, research, and so on. Almost any museum has some type of volunteer program.

Such 'wallowing' in art—gaining and sharing knowledge and enthusiasm for art with others—is like being a kid in a candy store!
